«(Bristol, England?)» Discusses the shortcomings of "clerical abolitionism". Defends Edward Mathews as one doing important work and not lacking in integrity. "His absorbing desire seems to be to purify the Baptist Church from slavery." The minister, Mr. Davis, who has been "undermining E. Mathews by all sorts of false reports...was an antagonist of Miss Weston for a whole evening here." British abolitionists "must have a practical channel in which to direct any sympathy we may enlist." Mentions the need of a paper. They are doing what they can to keep people on their guard against John Scoble, whose ally is Lewis Tappan. Britis[illegible]bolitionists cannot reject all who have not renounced pol[illegible] action. The writer emphasizes that "our machinery consist[illegible]nly of religious organizations"

‹Park St., Bristol, (England)› The writer congratulates the addressee on the success of the Boston Anti-Slavery Bazaar, "in spite of the defalcation of the wealthy Whig purchasers ..." G. Thompson spoke at the Bazaar in spite of Garrison's objections. The writer is well satisfied with the Garrisonians' acknowledgment of Bristol's contributions. Praises the reports of the Anti-Slavery fairs. Thinks more explanations should be given as to exactly what the contributions are used for. Neither Mrs. H. Thomas nor Mary Carpenter read Anti-Slavery literature, "both of them are confirmed by Russell ‹Carpenter› in their vague [illegible]as of the Abolitionists being 'very injudicious, intoler[illegible] &c., &c." Dr. Estlin couldn't understand the letter. The writer discourses at length on drudgery and the trials of illness. Was very glad that the leatherwork sold so well at the Fair. Says her father is much troubled by rheumatism. Tells about caring for him. "He goes to sleep over H. C. Wright's letters ..." Prefers the National Anti-Slavery Standard to the Liberator. "Mr. Quincy always excites our mirth ..." Regrets not having heard Jenny Lind sing. Mrs. M. later asked him for an article for the Morning Advertiser of London, whose editor, named Grant, was a friend of hers. W. W. Brown had a great success in Glasgow with his Panorama. W. and E. Crafts were also at the Glasgow meeting. Speaks of a plot entered into by W. H. Garnett and Mrs. Richardson to undermine the good feeling now existing in Scotland toward the Garrisonians. Dr. Estlin will complain to J.Scoble about his failure to account for funds collected for the Anti-Slavery cause. Park St. (Bristol, England). "Pray send Mr. James Grant (of the Morning Advertiser) a stylish Liberty Bell with a few lines of flattering gratitude from yourself." The writer lists a number of other desirable recipients of the Liberty Bell. Discusses some controversial matter of policy which cannot, however, be clearly understood, as part of p.1 is missing and the upper left end of p.2 mutilated. The writer offers suggestions for the Bazaar Gazette; wishes emphasis placed on the catholicity of the American A.S.Society's platform and on its fidelity to its original constitution. gewater district. Wants the addressee to remember "that nothing ... will be so useful as Mr. Garrison's works." The writer is eager to hear how the addressee got on with Henson, who was her fellow voyager. Miss Pugh and Mr. James had a discussion of the women's rights question. Mary ‹Estlin?› and the writer are "yet in a mist as to some of our wrongs, but the American and English position are in some degree different." Has heard that Mrs. Maria W. Chapman is looking for an apartment. Gives news of other acquaintances, mentioning Mr. ‹John Bishop› Estlin apparently in his capacity as physician. Tells of an argument [illegible] which Garrison was called "bloodthirsty" by a Mr. Big[illegible] (?), who also told the story of Parker Pillsbury and the dogs.

To Miss Weston «Anne Warrn Weston»

«Kingsdown, Bristol (England)» The writer dwells on British ignorance of slavery in the United States. People are too engrossed in domestic issues to study the situation in America, also American political party names are especially puzzling to English people. In England many believe that one can do more good by remaining in an organization than by leaving it. The Honorable Baptist Noel's "leaving the Church to unite with the Baptists" is seen in this light. W. Thomson speaks of Albert Barnes "as doing more good by protesting against slavery in his denomination" than he would do by leaving it. The writer refers to the "dear friends [illegible]ark St." (the Estlins) and explains the prejudice of som[illegible]le against working with Unitarians. However, they have a[illegible]ited committe. All are anxious for the success of the Anti-Slavery Advocate. The writer is

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

.Park St., (Bristol, England). The writer says Parker Pillsbury is improving steadily in health. Says she will have "to ransack my hoards for flying-mercuries, battledores, shuttlecocks, cups, balls, &c. ..." to provide exercise for him. Describes her father's physical condition. Gives instructions about obtaining various pamphlets. Refers to the marriage of a Mlle LeComte (Floreska LeComte?). Will provide Mrs. Russell Taylor, widow of the editor of the Manchester Guardian, with a letter of introduction to the addressee. Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of Mrs. Gideon Acland. Praises S. A. Steinthal. "Mr. Chamerovzow is I imagine drifting New Organizationward, Mr. Chesson is silent." ". [illegible] Thompson's daughter is likely to recover."

May To Miss Weston «Caroline Weston» No.38

«Durdham Downs, Bristol, (England)» The writer was staying with Harriet Lupton when "the joyful intelligence of Richmond's fall & Lee's surrender came" and also when the news of Lincoln's death was announced "in large placards on news boards." The previously hostile journals joined in the "common utterances of sympathy with your people & reverence for your martyred President." The writer joined a sewing circle for the Freedmen's Aid; it consists of members of the Lewin's Mead congregation, called by Mrs. Armstrong, and meets in the house of the minister, R. C. Jones. Considerable ignorance about the freedmen was mani[illegible]d by the members. The writer has read E. Quincy's farewe[illegible] the Nat. Anti-Slavery Standard.

[Bristol] Thinks Thessaly, Epirus, and Crete may be joined to Greece as result of Turkish war against Christians. Prince Charles of Hohenzollern to be King of Hungary but coalition of Danubian states of Bulgaria, Serbia, and Bosnia would make powerful Danubian Confederation. Germany to receive universal suffrage by grant of the king of Prussia. Will probably produce like demand in England. Deplores Johnson's traitorous attitudes, and denounciation of Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips, and Th. Stevens.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

:Bristol (England). The writer assures the addressee of her constant thoughts, especially during the time spent with Garrison. Hopes to see Garrison and the addressee's sister sail, and revive memories of the addressee's departure in 1855 and Garrison's in 1846. The writer's desire to go to America is "only lulled for the winter season, not abated." The writer has been able to gather some knowledge of Garrison's method of treating the Freedmen's Aid question. Garrison was perplexed about "the right mode of dealing with the sectarian element," which affects the British subscriptions. The writer and Garrison talked about the Standard; he tried to enlighten Mr.Webb, but the latter "ha[illegible]o have his idols broken." The writer enjoyed Mr.Dicey's Russian notes, "doubly because they came from the pen of your son in law."

[Bristol] Congratulates him on the beauty of the new metre [quarta rime] which he has developed [in "Memorial Verses on the Death of Theophile Gautier."]. To one who knows the work of Gautier, the critical value of his poem is as great as its imaginative force.

«Buxton, Derbyshire» Most of the first page is concerned with the box sent for the Bazaar by the ladies of Leeds. The writer was sorry to learn what the addressee thought of Douglass' prospects "both as to the Bazaar, & more particularly his paper." The writer had hoped that Douglass would make the paper (The North Star) succeed, though he felt doubtful about it from the beginning. The writer's friend Mr. Wilson has in the press an important work called "A Tribute to the Negro." The writer is trying the famous waters of Buxton for rheumatism. Mrs. Lupton and the writer i[illegible]te the addressee to visit them when she returns to England[illegible]o the writer's cousin, Miss Harriet Lupton, would like a[illegible]it. Comments on the situation on the continent.

To the Committee of the Anti-Slavery Bazaar to be held at Boston

.Carlisle (England). The ladies of Carlisle, in sending a box of contributions, "have been prompted to do so by the presence and powerful appeals of our beloved Friend Frederic Douglass." The children of one of the schools in the neighborhood devoted their play hours to working for the bazaar, and domestics in some families also gave their leisure time to the same object.

«Eden Banks» The writer thanks the addressee for a Liberty Bell. Says that the addressee may publish a letter of the writer sent with the contributions to the Anti-Slavery Bazaar. Mentions F. Douglass's difficulties with the steamship company. "Have you conversed with F. Douglass on the subject of the Printing Press..." "My sister Eliza Nicholson has gone to Newcastle to meet her dear friend Eliza Wigham..." "Sarah Wigham of Edinburgh is also my sister." Is glad that her husband's biscuits were appreciated at the Anti-Slavery fair.

.Eden Bank (Scotland). The writer thanks the addressee for a Liberty Bell. Mentions a saddle and bridle sent to the Anti-Slavery Bazaar by an admirer of F. Douglass. Wants to know if it was "appreciated in your Land." Says that contributions to the Anti-Slavery Cause have been much reduced by donations to Irish relief. When F. Douglass left England there was no one left to rouse people up to help the slaves.

«Eden Bank» The writer is forwarding a small box of contributions for the addressee's fair. Believes that the depression has prevented many from contributing. "But the Anti-Slavery cause is as dear to us as ever..." Believes that it is "too precious to lose of its many supporters by a difference of judgment as to the manner of conducting it." If they cannot unite, "let each carry out his own views in meekness & Christian charity to those who differ from them..."

[Eden Bank, Carlisle, (Scotland?)] The writer thanks the addressee for sending her sister and herself each a "Liberty Bell." Regrets that they could not send more things, but "no one seemed inclined to help us." The writer is "exceedingly interested" in the "North Star," edited by Frederick Douglass. Comments enthusiastically on the revolution in France, the "noble acts of the Republic," and especially the resolution to free the slaves in their dominion. Welcomes also the abolition of capital punishment for political offenses.

«Cavendish» The writer tells of her disappointment at not being able to see the leaders of the Anti-Slavery movement at the convention in New York. Having decided to attend and having started on her journey, she found on reaching the Connecticut River that the bridge had been swept away by a freshet, and was obliged to give up her enterprise. Expresses her Anti-Slavery convictions and her loyalty to the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society and the Boston Female Society. Clerical policy is responsible for the hushing up of local Anti-Slavery feeling. Non-Resistance meets with opposition, but is taking "deep root in s[illegible] hearts." Wishes Henry C. Wright could speak at Caven[illegible]

«Chatham, (England)» The writer encloses a correspondence with Mr. Wheatley, and enumerates the literature that she has sent him. Maintains that "he does not see clearly the point-" that it is necessary to expose the shortcomings of the British & Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, because it has the confidence of the British Anti-Slavery public. Asks the addressee's advice about procedures in respect to this society. "What has been the effect of Mrs. Chapman's correspondence?" Thinks that George Thompson must have had a good meeting.

«Chatham, (England)» The list of Anti-Slavery associations is in the Minute book which the writer gave into the addressee's charge. Reports on bazaar affairs, mentioning that a certain handiwork ("rings") involved more than 360,000 stitches each. Frederick Wheeler, a "benevolent Quaker" thinks highly of Garrison and wished to know more about the shortcomings of the British & Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. The writer learned from Rebecca Tatum, former Secretary of the Ladies' (Anti-Slavery) Society, that it was dissolved on the occasion of the abolition of West Indian slavery. The writer has communicated with Miss Tr[illegible] on the possiblity of forming an association to co-operate [illegible] the American Anti-Slavery Society, and asks the addres[illegible] to suggest a specific object to lay before such a new society.

«Chelmsford, England» "How much have we felt thy absence during our convention!" The writer, with much indignation, condemns the exclusion of women at the so-called World's Convention in London. Quotes James Cropper as saying: "...it is no use talking Anne the men are gone to sleep & it is impossible to rouse them you must go forth." Asserts that "the scientific congresses of France are men & women membered myself being a member & having addressed them at Liège & at Blois on the subject of slavery ..." Begs the addressee to send "the emphatic question across the Atlantic from thy strong pen to our exclusives..."

To "Dear Friend" (Mary Gray Chapman?)

‹Darlington, England› The writer thanks the addressee for two letters and sympathizes deeply with her in her present difficulties. Thinks that the New Organizationists are using their last reserves if they have to descend to personal slander. Resents the support given by the London Committee to the New Organizationists. Objects to the publication of private correspondence in the Massachusetts Abolitionist, and particularly to the base attack on John A. Collins. Says that a box sent to her by Garrison never arrived. The writer is glad to hear of the safe arrival of Mr. & Mrs. Henry G. Chapman in Hayti. Didn't [illegible] the Phillips's trip to the Continent did Mrs. Phillips [illegible]h good. Invites the addressee to visit her in England.

«Darlington, (England)» Sent a bundle of pamphlets which included the Opium lectures, the late B. Lundy's last work on Texas and two numbers of Right and Wrong in Massachusetts. Hopes J. S. will do all she can "to bring about the suppression of the traffic «in opium?»" E. (P.) N. discusses her own pamphlet on the views of the Society of Friends in America on the Anti-Slavery question. "The largest part consists of a copious extract from Wm Bassett's 1st letter ..." Wrote to Elizabeth Robson to ask whether W. Bassett's statements concerning her were true. Heard that G. Thompson's lecture at Leeds was excellent. James Hume also made an admirable address.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

[Darlington, England] The writer is grieved that the Friends in America, in respect to the African race, are "deviating so widely from the principles & spirit they profess." To the writer's regret, her name has been withheld from a pamphlet in circulation among English Friends, which contains portions of letters by William Bassett. The writer has been censured by high-standing members of her Society, but is happy to bear reproach. The (Friends'?) yearly Meeting in London is to be on the 20th of next month. Some of the English ministers "have encouraged Friends in America in their exclusiveness." George Th[illegible]n, having recovered from illness, has arrived.

To "My dear Friend" [Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman]

[Darlington, England] The writer comments on the preparation of the box for Boston by her Scotch friends, and on the Fair's being held in Faneuil Hall. Contrasts the present situation of the Abolitionists with their unhappy state ten years ago. Promised contributions to the Philadelphia Fair. Saw H. Martineau at Ambleside, where she is building herself a house near Fox Stowe, where the late Thomas Arnold of Rugby lived. H. Martineau told the writer how mesmerism had restored her health. Hopes F. Douglass will come to Darlington, and praises the narrative of his life. Tells about a controversy with N. P. Roge[illegible] G. Thompson is engrossed in labors for the two Indian p[illegible]s.

.Darlington(England). Writes sympathetically about the labors of the addressee for the bazaar and hopes that her health has not permanently suffered from them. A week ago yesterday the writer had "a real treat" by the company of James and E(liza) F(rances) Eddy; the writer had long known the latter by her former name (Mrs.Meriam) and through the praises of H.C.Wright. The writer sends a small volume "The Martyr of Demarara" by an anonymous author motivated by a desire to help the cause. Sends thanks for the Liberty Bell. The writer is sorry for "dear Garrison & his wife in this fresh bereavement." Notes [illegible] trials of various kinds have assailed the writer's frie[illegible] some who have been in affluence now reduced nearly to beggary thro' the panic in the .Darlington, England. Has recently heard from Anne Knight that the addressee was in Paris. The writer has just returned from a visit to her "dear & excellent friends" Jane and Eliza Wigham in Edinburgh, who are the "responsible parties for receiving & dispatching the contributions" for the Boston bazaar. There was a display of articles at their house. A few things went to Rochester. An excellent collection for Boston was made by Glasgow friends. All things from Manchester and Carlisle went to Rochester. The writer thinks that the removal of causes that restrict the cultivation of cotton in British India would be a most efficient aid to anti-slavery. Rejoices to hear of Wendell Phillips's return to [illegible]th.

To Whom?

Darlington, (England). The writer thanks the addressee for a Liberty Bell. Condemns the Fugitive Slave Law. Asks whether the present situation in America "is likely to lead to some dreadful crises which will end in disruption of the Union ..." Is pleased that the Glasgow circular had so little effect on the contributions from Scotland. Has just received a letter from W. Phillips which she will send to R. D. Webb "that he may enjoy it too & see about Spear, I am so glad to have W's opinion of his mission ..." Says that (Charles) Spear cannot expect much from her. "... things are turning out bad respecting Penningt[illegible] The writer hints that he got money under false pretences,[illegible]. our Edinbro' friends I think wish him quietly to leave the country." Asks if any attempt is being made to release Daniel Drayton and Edward Sayres. Did not know that Mrs. M. W. Chapman intended to return to America in 1851. Bought a knitted counterpane for the Anti-Slavery fair. Read J. Haughton's letter on the proper method of showing the English national attitude toward Slavery.
